BOOKS

Denyer Willis, Graham. (2015). The Killing Consensus: Police, Organized Crime and the Regulation of Life and Death in Urban Brazil. Oakland: University of California Press.

(In process) Politics Gone Missing

Every year, 25,000 people 'go missing' in the state of São Paulo, Brazil. This ethnographic work examines the political production and use of 'missing people' as a political, but ostensibly apolitical, category. I trace the rise in disappeared people through the bureaucracies of the state, the struggles and trauma of families, in the disinterment and materiality of public and clandestine cemeteries, and via the ongoing violence of racialised policing and agentic organised crime. I argue that the ‘unevident’ political condition of people gone missing is decisive in the contemporary practice of governance by abandonment, where truth and evidence are subsumed to the violence of ‘third things’ and the certainty of supposition. Making people ‘go missing’ from politics is a widespread political condition today in age, which takes capitalism and inequitably valued life as its ethical flagstaff.
